- Possible power cuts and loss of other services to some homes and businesses

Further details

Outbreaks of rain will spread across the UK during Sunday with prolonged spells of heavy rain developing during the afternoon in many western areas. A further 20-30 mm rain is likely to occur quite widely with perhaps as much as 40-50 mm on high ground in northern parts of England and 60-90 mm over the higher ground in Wales. Following heavy rain in these areas during previous days, flooding impacts and disruption to transport is possible. Strong to gale force southwesterly winds are likely with potential for leaf fall to exacerbate flooding in places.
